Regarding – Motors Liquidation Company f/k/a General Motors Corp
Case no. 09-50026 (REG)

The General Motors bonds we bought years ago to fund our retirement were declared to be worth very little, maybe nothing, when the government took control of the company and pushed it into Chapter 11. We were victimized.

Now, we read in the papers that General Motors handed out stock shares worth more than $1.3 million to its current and former chief executives. It is blatantly unfair for the executives of a failed company to receive tremendous pay when the bondholders are left to beg for pennies on the dollar. Instead of handing the executives $1.3 million in addition to the pay they already received when the company was going down, that money should go into a pot for the bondholders who put hard-earned money into the Company.

When bondholders are treated with disdain, they lose confidence in the financial markets and in the government.
